

The Mission Anchor

What we build, how we behave, and what we will never do. The constitution of 4orm Finance.

The mission, values, culture, and commitments of 4orm Finance, an Alberta company. Binding on the founders and the team who sign onto it.

An internal charter of the Company, prepared and held by the founders and the team who sign onto it.

PREPARED BY	STATUS	CATEGORY	UPDATED
4orm Finance Founders	Internal	Constitutional document	July 2026

01 • MISSION

The mission and the North Star

4orm Finance is built to strengthen Canadian financial infrastructure: to give Canadians and the institutions that serve them privacy, security, and fair, lawful access in how they hold, move, and settle assets.

The mission

To build regulated infrastructure that lets Canadians and Canadian institutions issue, hold, move, settle, and verify assets with privacy, security, and fair access, under Canadian law, and with fewer unnecessary intermediaries between a person and what they own.

The North Star

Beyond the product, 4orm exists to help the Canadian financial system become independent and sovereign, to protect Canadians from inflationary asset erosion, currency debasement, and arbitrary gatekeeping, and to keep the rails of the country's financial future Canadian-owned, regulated, and built to last. We are building for a hundred years, not the next quarter.

4orm Finance is an Alberta company. Under Canadian corporate law, its directors may weigh this mission and the Company's stakeholders alongside its shareholders in the decisions they make. The commitments below are binding on the people who run and build the Company.

02 • VALUES

The values we operate by

These principles bind every founder, director, officer, employee, and partner. They define how we hire, lead, promote, reward, and part ways. They are not aspirations, they are standards.

01 Think Big. Execute Better.

Vision without execution is imagination. We set ambitious goals, think beyond today's limitations, and execute with discipline, precision, and consistency. We step into the discomfort of being misunderstood or questioned, because meaningful innovation rarely earns immediate acceptance.

02 Keep Canada First.

Canada's financial future should remain in Canadian hands. We strengthen Canada's financial infrastructure through sovereignty, resilience, and responsible innovation, reducing unnecessary dependence on outside interests while serving Canadians first.

03 Protect People.

Every decision begins with the people we serve. We act with transparency, accountability, and care, making decisions we would proudly defend in public and always within the law. Trust is not given, it is earned through every decision we make.

04 Serve People. Leave Politics at the Door.

We do not serve political agendas. We serve people. Every individual deserves fair access, respect, and the freedom to hold their own views without discrimination. Finance should unite people through opportunity, not divide them through ideology.

05 Principles Before Profit.

Capital is earned. Trust is protected. We will walk away from opportunities that require compromising our principles, regardless of their value. Reputation compounds far longer than revenue ever will.

06 Build. Deliver. Repeat.

Ideas create possibility. Execution creates impact. We develop meaningful work, and measure ourselves by results, not activity. Our goal is to make what seems complicated simple.

07 Truth is the Standard.

We communicate honestly, address difficult issues early, and take responsibility for outcomes. We own our decisions, our mistakes, and our successes.

08 Love on the Competition.

Competition challenges us to become better. We compete relentlessly while treating every competitor with professionalism, humility, and respect. A stronger Canadian financial ecosystem pushes everyone forward, and Canadians are the ones who benefit.

09 Run Toward Change.

Innovation belongs to those willing to move first. We embrace change, challenge convention, and build the future instead of waiting for it. What seems impossible today often becomes tomorrow's standard, and we intend to define it.

10 Protect the Mission at All Costs.

We are our brother's keeper. Every decision must strengthen the mission entrusted to us. We protect our purpose above convenience, popularity, and short-term gain, and steward the future with God-fearing accountability for all Canadians.

03 • CULTURE

How the 4orm family works

Structure protects the mission; culture is what makes the mission worth protecting. We build our culture on the way the highest-performing groups actually work, and everyone who joins signs onto it.

We hand-pick, on merit, and we are ruthlessly selective.

Qualified first, mission-aligned, and a genuine fit. We would rather wait than settle, because one wrong hire costs the whole team.

Belonging and a high bar, together.

From day one you know the bar is high, and that we chose you because we are confident you can clear it. Belonging and high standards are the same message here, not opposites.

Candor, both directions, then commit.

We say what we mean and surface problems early, in honest, blameless reviews. We disagree hard, and once the call is made we commit fully. Leaders go first.

Open door.

Criticism, feedback, and observation are welcome from anyone, to anyone. The best idea wins, whoever it comes from.

We are our brother's keeper.

If we see it, we own it, and we make sure it gets fixed. Nobody says 'not my job' here.

Clear purpose, named out loud.

We name and rank the few things that matter, connect them to why, and repeat them. Nobody has to guess what is important.

The family, and the honest question.

We love people on the way in, and we love people on the way out. We also ask the keeper's question honestly: would we fight to keep you? When the answer is no, we part with respect and generosity, both ways. We do not carry victims, and we do not keep score.

Ownership and speed.

Boots on, every day. We work for the team, not the other way around, and we get the scoreboard to change.

04 • COMMITMENTS

What we build for Canadians

The Company commits to build, maintain, and offer the following, on the terms set out in this Anchor.

Asset rails.

Regulated infrastructure to buy, sell, move, store, and verify assets, honouring the principles of money: store of value, medium of exchange, unit of account, durability, divisibility, portability, scarcity, and recognizability.

Fractional ownership.

Access to assets historically gated to institutions, on a fractional, regulated, verifiable basis.

Custody and settlement.

Fiduciary, regulated custody, settlement, and clearing, with customer assets legally segregated and never rehypothecated.

Identity and verification.

Proof of what is needed without exposure of what is not: privacy-preserving verification.

Cross-border value movement.

Movement of value across jurisdictions, under applicable law.

Lending and credit.

Lending against tokenized assets on fair, transparent, and lawful terms.

Access to stores of value.

Access to asset classes including gold, silver, and real estate as long-term stores of value.

Generational transfer, resilience, education, and innovation.

Inheritance and succession infrastructure that survives the holder; operational, technical, and legal resilience through political and currency shocks; education of Canadians on the principles of money; and innovation to help Canada lead on the global stage of fintech.

05 • THE BARS

The Absolute Bars

The following are absolute. They bind the founders, directors, officers, and employees, and they do not bend to capital, partnership, regulatory pressure, or convenience outside the law. The Founder and CEO commits to each of them personally in the CEO Commitment Statement.

1. No participation in politically or faith-motivated account closures or extra-judicial freezes.
2. No sharing of customer data beyond what valid legal process or law requires. We comply with lawful orders and reporting obligations, disclose only what is compelled, and refuse informal or extra-judicial requests.
3. No participation in debanking coalitions, shared blacklists, or de-risking outside legal process.
4. No account restriction or service denial except on lawful, documented, and individualized grounds, applied on the same objective criteria to every eligible customer.
5. No programmable-restriction infrastructure that gives a third party conditional control over a person's own assets, accounts, or transactions.
6. No collection or retention of customer data beyond what is operationally necessary or required by law.
7. No surveillance or data monetization for advertising, profiling, social credit, or ideological assessment.
8. No social-credit or ideological gatekeeping, and no deplatforming for protected expression or belief.
9. No commingling, rehypothecation, or pledging of customer assets.
10. No use of quarterly earnings targets as a primary directional input.
11. No retaliation against any person for the principled exercise of refusal.
12. No surrender or weakening of any Mission Anchor provision under political, commercial, regulatory, or shareholder pressure outside the law.

How the mission holds

The mission is held by law, by structure, and by the people who run and build the Company.

The law already helps.

40rm Finance is an Alberta company. Under Canadian corporate law (Peoples v. Wise and BCE v. 1976 Debentureholders), its directors may lawfully weigh the mission and the Company's stakeholders in their decisions, and are not bound to maximize shareholder value. This gives mission-driven decisions real cover within the law.

Mission stewardship.

The Advisory Council, and a named Mission Steward within it, review the decisions that touch this Anchor and oversee the annual Mission Report. This is an internal governance role, not a transfer of legal control.

The Decision Matrix.

Every material decision maps to an owner, the required input, and a final authority across five tiers from Constitutional to Routine. A defined protocol governs crisis and pressure events, logged within hours, reviewed by counsel and the Mission Steward, and disclosed in an Annual Mission Report. See the Decision Matrix and Governance document.

The CEO Commitment.

The Founder and CEO binds himself personally to every bar and to a standard at least as high as any member of the team, on a decades horizon. See the Founder and CEO Commitment Statement.

07 • AMENDMENT

Amendment

This Anchor is a standing charter, and it is not changed quietly.

Amendment. Changes to these commitments require the approval set in the Company's governing documents and counsel review.

This document is read together with its companions: the Founder and CEO Commitment Statement, and the Decision Matrix and Governance.