

How we carry ourselves

The conduct standard for 4orm advisors.

As a named advisor, how you conduct yourself reflects on 4orm and on an image the Company intends to last a century. This code sets the standard, and it sits alongside your engagement letter and the Mission Anchor.

IN PUBLIC AND IN PRIVATE

Represent us well. Conduct yourself, online and offline, in interviews, at events, with regulators and investors, in a way that reflects the Company's values.

Confer before you speak. No press, podcasts, or substantive public commentary on 4orm without the CEO's and Kevin's sign-off. Where doubt exists, ask first.

Stay in your lane. Respect who owns what, capital markets with Bruce, brand with Kevin, and keep the CEO in the loop on anything that touches the roadmap.

INTEGRITY AND CONFIDENTIALITY

Hold what you learn. You are bound by the Mutual NDA. The data room and everything in it is confidential and stays inside.

Disclose conflicts. Raise any relationship that could reasonably be seen as a conflict, promptly and in writing.

The Absolute Bars apply to you. The Mission Anchor's bars, no data monetization, no ideological gatekeeping, no surrender of the mission under pressure, bind advisors too.

Own it. Candor, accountability, and no victims. If you see it, you own it.

Breach of this code or the Mission Anchor is a for-cause matter under your engagement letter.
